1. The Chinese Communist Army has recently issued orders to improve the diet of combat troops. The substance of the order reads as follows:
  - a. Reports from the field armies and military districts indicate that combat troops are suffering from diseases caused by malnutrition and vitamin deficiency. Among these diseases are dry and itching skin, night blindness, malfocus of the eyes, muscular twitches and spasms, and sores on the tongue.
  - b. The various units must take immediate measures to improve the diet of combat troops.
  - c. Medical personnel to the Supply and Service Corps must investigate the nutritive content in the diet of combat troops and make a comprehensive report. Speedy medical treatment must be given to those suffering from diseases arising from malnutrition.
  - d. The political workers must constantly inspect the troops and encourage competition for improving the diet in the army.
  - e. Commanders and heads of political departments should frequently eat in company messes so that they will know what improvements are being made.
